Slow, long, hot, lazy, and just...me. And though this is not a post about the weekend (though it could be, if you can ever find a use for chunky salsa), it is the perfect excuse to share one of my favorite things to make and eat—a crock pot. Saturday, I had the pleasure of meeting the creators of and the we agreed that our childhoods were filled with crock pots. You see, though it was a given that our parents would make dinner, I know that it wasn't a given that they made awesome dinner. We were raised in homes where those meals were just good enough. Not so awesome. This weekend, I still had a few leftovers in my refrigerator and I was craving some authentic Asian dishes. Like cabbage and tofu and lemongrass and chinese black beans and shallot. I was craving a slow, hot dinner. I was craving comfort. I was craving a crock pot. I turned to the crock pot and I heard Grandma's voice: "The only true peace is in the home, and the only genuine comfort is a crock pot. —"Grandma's Fried Chicken Dinner I made a copy of that recipe and I have made it several times. I guess it's as good now as it was over 30 years ago. And it is one of those recipes that makes you think "I have to have a crock pot now, as soon as I finish this next to last season of college." From Mom: Crock pot soup can be made with what ever vegetable or meat you would like. I prefer to use the meats and vegetables I have available. It depends what the crops turn out to be and what is in my refrigerator. So far this winter I have done homemade spaghetti sauce, chicken and dumplings and these two soups... Crock Pot Vegetable Soup Crock Pot Beef and Barley Soup Monday, through this week we will be sharing the recipes for these two soups,
